

Email Campaign Flow

A 29-email, three-track lifecycle: nurture leads with a newsletter-style education sequence, onboard and retain patients, and re-engage the ones who went quiet. Copy is final-draft quality and independent of design; every email lists the site asset it would use.

29 emails (+3 vertical variants)

tracks: lead · patient · reengage

90 days of coverage per contact

Proposal v1 · 2026-09-12 · Draft for review — everything here is subject to change.

How the flow is organised

Three tracks, one contact at a time. A person is only ever in one track; purchases and cancellations move them automatically. Transactional emails (order confirmed, shipped, clinician messages, receipts) run separately and are not counted here.

Track A — Lead Nurture — "Meet Freeley"

A newsletter-style sequence that earns trust before it asks for the sale. The first 11 emails are education and story; the offer only appears once the reader knows who prescribes, who compounds, what it costs and what to expect. Vertical-aware: Emails A4 and A8 have a version per product line based on what the lead said they were interested in.

Audience	Anyone who gave us an email but has not purchased: quiz step 2, exit-intent popup, checkout email field, the waitlist list.
Cadence	16 emails over 30 days. Every other day for the first two weeks (education), then twice a week (conversion).
Enters when	Email captured (captureLead.js) or waitlist import.
Leaves when	A purchase moves the contact to Track B immediately. No purchase after Day 30 → Track C.

Track B — Patient Newsletter — "The Freeley Journal"

Runs alongside the transactional emails (order confirmed, shipped, clinician message, receipts) — those stay exactly as they are. This track is the "how do I get the most out of this" layer: first-week prep, side-effect playbook, habits, progress check-ins, refill heads-up, referral, 90-day review. It replaces the current 3-step onboarding drip.

Audience	Every paying patient, from the day of purchase.
Cadence	9 emails over the first 90 days, then a monthly edition.
Enters when	Successful payment (create-authnet-transaction.js).
Leaves when	Subscription cancelled or refund issued → moves to the existing win-back journey.

Track C — Re-engagement — "Still here"

Low frequency, honest tone. Each email gives one new reason to look again (a new plan option, the cost of waiting, a plain "what held you back?"), and the last one openly says we will stop emailing — which protects deliverability for everyone else.

Audience Leads who finished Track A without buying and have not unsubscribed.

Cadence 4 emails, Day 45 → Day 90 after capture, then the contact is parked on a monthly newsletter only.

Enters when Track A completed, no purchase.

Leaves when A purchase (→ Track B) or the Day-90 sunset email (→ monthly newsletter only).

Timeline at a glance

Day numbers count from the moment the contact enters the track (email captured, or purchase).

Track A — Lead Nurture — "Meet Freeley"

Track B — Patient Newsletter — "The Freeley Journal"

Track C — Re-engagement — "Still here"

The hardest part of getting help was always the getting.

Hi {{first_name}},

Think about the last time you almost did something about your weight, your hair, your sex life, your energy. What stopped you probably wasn't the treatment. It was the six-week wait for an appointment, the time off work, the awkward conversation at a pharmacy counter, the surprise bill.

We built Freeley to remove every one of those steps. You answer questions online. A licensed physician reviews them. A licensed pharmacy compounds your treatment. It arrives at your door in a plain box. Your clinician is a message away the whole time.

Same medicine, same doctors, same pharmacies — minus everything that used to get in the way.

Real physicians. Licensed pharmacies. Nothing in between.

Hi `{{first_name}}`,

The most common question we get isn't about price or side effects. It's "is this real?" Fair question. Here's exactly who touches your case:

- A licensed U.S. physician. Every assessment is read by a doctor licensed in your state. They decide whether treatment is appropriate, which one, and at what starting point — and they can say no.
- A licensed 503A compounding pharmacy. Your treatment is prepared for you by a pharmacy regulated by your state board of pharmacy, under a physician's prescription. "Compounded" means made-to-order, not made-up.
- Third-party testing. Our partner pharmacies test for potency and sterility before anything ships.

You can read more about our pharmacy partners and quality standards any time — we published it because we think you should be able to check.

Your last diet didn't fail. Your biology did.

Hi `{{first_name}}`,

If you've lost weight before and watched it come back, that's not a character flaw. Your body defends its weight with hunger hormones, and they don't care how disciplined you are.

GLP-1 treatment works on that signal directly:

- Quiets the "food noise." The constant background thinking about the next meal gets turned down.
- You stay full longer. Digestion slows, so a normal portion actually satisfies.
- Improves metabolic health. Blood sugar and appetite regulation move in the right direction together.

A physician decides if it's right for you and where to start. Plans begin at $199/month on the 12-month plan — physician review, treatment and shipping included.

Hair loss

Preheader Stop the shedding first. Then regrow. Here's the timeline.

They won't stop asking what you did.

Hi {{first_name}},

Hair loss is one of the few things that is genuinely easier to stop than to reverse — which is why starting earlier matters more than starting perfectly.

Physician-prescribed hair treatment works in two stages:

- Stops shedding in its tracks. The hormone signal that miniaturizes follicles gets blocked.
- Reactivates dormant follicles. Follicles that thinned out but never died get a second chance.
- Fits your routine. A daily step you'll forget you're doing by week two.

Most patients see shedding slow within 2–3 months and visible regrowth by month 4–6. Plans start at $49/month on the 24-month plan.

Two minutes. Here's exactly what's in it.

Hi `{{first_name}}`,

People sometimes stall on the assessment because they don't know what's coming. So here it is:

- Your goal. What you want to change and how long it's been on your mind.
- Your health history. Conditions, medications, allergies — the things a physician must know before prescribing.
- Your habits. Sleep, activity, alcohol. Not to judge — to choose the right starting point.
- Your ID. Telehealth law requires a photo ID so your physician knows who they're treating.
- Your contact details. So the clinician can reach you if they have a question.

Everything you enter is stored on HIPAA-compliant infrastructure and seen only by your care team. Nothing is shared with employers, insurers, or anyone else.

Traditional care hides its price in three places: the visit, the pharmacy, and the bill that arrives later. Freeley has one number and it includes:

- Physician review and ongoing clinical oversight
- Your compounded treatment
- Shipping, straight to your door
- Unlimited messaging with your care team
- Automatic refills, so you never run out

The longer the plan, the lower the monthly price — because it lets our pharmacy partners plan ahead. GLP-1 weight loss, for example, runs from $299/month on a 1-month plan to $199/month on the 12-month plan. Hair loss from $89 down to $49. Sexual wellness from $99 down to $59. Subject Is it safe? An honest answer.

The safety question, answered like an adult.

Hi {{first_name}},

We could tell you "it's perfectly safe" and you'd rightly stop trusting us. Here's the real answer.

Every treatment has side effects. Most are mild and fade within the first weeks — for GLP-1s, that's typically nausea or fullness; for hair treatment, it's rare; for sexual wellness, headaches or flushing. Your physician tells you what to expect for your specific treatment before you start.

That's why a physician screens you first. Some conditions and medications mean a treatment isn't right for you. The assessment exists so a doctor can catch that — and they do say no when they should.

And why the care team stays on the case. If anything feels wrong, you message your clinician from your Hub and hear back, on average, within 24 hours. Serious concerns get escalated the same day.

Safe doesn't mean risk-free. It means someone qualified is paying attention. That's the part we can promise.

Hi `{{first_name}}`,

Results aren't a light switch. Here's the honest shape of the first three months for most patients — your physician will tailor this to you.

Weight loss: Week 1–2, appetite noticeably quieter. Month 1, first few pounds and smaller portions feeling normal. Month 3, steady loss and a dose your physician has adjusted to you.

Hair loss: Month 1–2, shedding starts to slow (this is the goal, even if the mirror hasn't caught up). Month 3–4, thinning stabilizes. Month 6, visible regrowth for most patients.

Sexual wellness: First use, results. Month 1, you've found the timing that works. Month 3, it's simply not something you think about anymore.

Longevity: Week 2–4, sleep and daytime energy shift first. Month 2–3, recovery, focus and the markers your physician tracks.

The one thing every timeline has in common: none of it starts until the assessment does.

Five things people get wrong about online prescriptions

Day 15

Goal Newsletter-style myth-busting. Shareable, low-pressure.

Audience All leads

Layout Numbered editorial list, no product imagery, one small button

Subject 5 things people get wrong about online prescriptions

Preheader No, it's not "a bot writing scripts."

Five myths, five minutes.

Hi {{first_name}},

1. "It's not a real doctor." It is. Licensed in your state, with the same responsibilities as the one down the road. They can and do decline cases.

2. "Compounded means knock-off." Compounding is a licensed pharmacy preparing a medication for an individual prescription. It's regulated by state boards of pharmacy and has existed far longer than the internet.

3. "You just click and it ships." You answer a full medical history and upload ID. A physician reads it. Then it ships.

4. "It's only for people who are really struggling." Most Freeley patients are people who simply got tired of waiting to deal with something.

5. "The price is a trap." One number, everything included, cancel any time. We put the whole ladder on a public pricing page for a reason.

Got a sixth one? Reply to this email — we read every one.

Preheader A calm guide to side effects: when to wait it out, when to message.

Your week-one playbook.

Hi `{{first_name}}`,

Most side effects show up in the first two weeks and fade as your body adjusts. Here's how to think about them:

Usually normal — give it a few days: mild nausea or fullness, a headache, feeling more tired than usual, a mild reaction at an injection site, a little flushing.

Message your care team today: anything severe, anything that lasts more than a few days, anything that worries you. There is no such thing as a silly message — that's literally what the care team is for, and average response time is under 24 hours.

Call 911 or go to the ER: trouble breathing, chest pain, a severe allergic reaction, or anything that feels like an emergency. Don't wait for a message reply.

Your physician may adjust your treatment based on what you report — that's not a setback, it's the process working.

Month one, done.

Hi `{{first_name}}`,

A month ago you filled out a form. Here's what usually has happened by now — and what comes next.

What most patients notice by month one: the first measurable change — a quieter appetite, less shedding, a routine that just works, better sleep. Not the finish line; the proof of concept.

What your physician does now: reviews your check-in and decides whether your treatment stays the same or steps up. Adjustments are normal and expected — most plans are designed to increase gradually.

What you don't need to do: re-order. Refills are automatic. You'll get a heads-up email before each one, and you can change your address, card, or plan from your Hub.

Your refill is coming up

Day 45 · ~Day 45 (or 7 days before the next billing cycle, whichever is sooner)

Goal	No-surprise billing. Reduce chargebacks and "I forgot" cancellations.
Audience	All patients with an upcoming renewal
Layout	Simple notice card with date, amount, and three action links
Note	Complements the existing refill-reminder journey (3 days before ARB renewal); this one is the earlier, friendlier heads-up.

Subject	Heads-up: your next refill ships soon
Preheader	Nothing to do unless something changed.

Your next refill is on its way soon.

Hi {{first_name}},

Just so nothing surprises you: your next refill is scheduled for {{next_refill_date}} and your card on file will be charged {{next_refill_amount}} on that date. You don't need to do anything.

If something has changed, it takes a minute in your Hub:

- Moved? Update your shipping address.
- New card? Update your payment method.
- Need a pause? Message your care team — they'll help you decide whether to adjust or hold.

Questions about your treatment itself go to your care team, not to billing. Same button.

Know someone who's been putting it off?

Day 60

Goal	Referral. Only works if a referral program exists; otherwise a plain "share" email.
Audience	Patients active at day 60
Layout	Warm, short, one share button
Note	OPTIONAL — needs Anthony to decide on a referral incentive. Without one, keep as a simple forward-to-a-friend email.

Subject Know someone who's been putting it off?

Preheader You were there two months ago. Pass it on.

Two months ago, that was you.

Hi `{{first_name}}`,

Most Freeley patients tell us the same thing: they wish they'd started sooner, and they know someone who's exactly where they were two months ago.

If that's you, forward this — or send them your link. `[IF REFERRAL PROGRAM: "They get $X off their first order and you get $X off your next refill."]`

No pressure, no spam. Just the same two-minute assessment you took.

Ninety days with Freeley.

Hi `{{first_name}}`,

Three months ago you started something most people spend years thinking about. Here's a good moment to take stock.

Look back. Open your first check-in message in your Hub and compare it to today. That gap is the whole point.

Talk to your physician. Month three is when treatment plans get reviewed — whether to hold, adjust, or plan the next phase. Send an update so that review is based on you, not on averages.

Tell us. If Freeley has worked for you, a two-sentence review helps the next person who's on the fence. Reply to this email; we'll ask before we ever publish anything.

And if you're curious: the same physicians, pharmacy partners and flat pricing cover hair, sexual wellness, weight and longevity. Patients often add a second focus around now.

What's changed since you looked

Day 45 · Day 45 after capture

Goal	Give a genuinely new reason to return: new plan lengths, new products, new content.
Audience	Track A completed, no purchase
Layout	Newsletter: 3 short "new" items
Note	The two [NEW ITEM] slots should be refreshed quarterly so this email never feels canned.

Subject	A few things have changed since you looked
Preheader	New plan options, new treatments, same physicians.

Since you last looked.

Hi {{first_name}},

It's been about six weeks. A quick catch-up on what's new at Freeley:

- Longer plans, lower prices. 12- and 24-month plans bring the monthly price down significantly — GLP-1 weight loss from $199/month on the 12-month plan.
- [NEW ITEM — e.g. a new treatment, a new product line, a new Hub feature.]
- [NEW ITEM — e.g. a new patient story, a physician Q&A.]

Your assessment is still saved. It picks up exactly where you left it.

Subject The math on waiting

Preheader Not a guilt trip. Just arithmetic.

Waiting has a price too.

Hi `{{first_name}}`,

This isn't a guilt trip. It's just the arithmetic people don't usually do.

Two months ago you were interested enough to give us your email. Since then, the thing you wanted to change has had two more months to do what it does — weight that stays, hair that keeps thinning, a problem that keeps being a problem. Two months from now, the same.

Or: two minutes today, a physician in 24–48 hours, and two months from now you're the one with a check-in message to look back on.

Same price either way. Only one of them moves.

No countdown. Just the door.

Hi {{first_name}},

We've told you who prescribes, who compounds, what it costs and what to expect. There isn't much more to say, so we'll just ask plainly:

If Freeley is right for you, the assessment is here and takes two minutes. [IF ALLOWED: "Your code {{promo_code}} still works for 10% off your first order."]

If it isn't — that's genuinely fine. Next email we'll ask if you'd rather we stop.

Goal	Sunset / preference email. Protects sender reputation; keeps only engaged contacts.
Audience	Track A + C completed, no purchase, no click in 30 days
Layout	Plain text style, two buttons
Note	Contacts who do not click are moved to a "dormant" segment and receive nothing further — good for deliverability.

Subject	Should we stop emailing you?
Preheader	One click keeps you on the monthly letter. No click, and we go quiet.

We'd rather ask than assume.

Hi {{first_name}},

You haven't opened much from us lately, and that's a perfectly good answer. We don't want to be noise in your inbox.

If you'd like to keep getting our monthly letter — patient stories, new treatments, honest answers, once a month — click below. If you do nothing, we'll take the hint and stop.

Either way, the assessment stays saved under your email, whenever you want it.

Keep me on the monthly letter

SUGGESTED VISUAL

No image — text-only email

No image — plain text performs best for a sunset email.

C4 How it renders — Should we stop emailing you?

Desktop · Gmail/Outlook at 1100px

Mobile · iPhone width (390px)

Rules that apply to every email

Text is independent of design

Every email is complete as subject + preheader + headline + body + CTA. The image and layout columns are suggestions from the existing site assets in public/assets/ — the designer can swap any of them without touching the copy.

No medical details in marketing email

Track B (patients) never names a specific medication or dose — those live in the Hub. This is enforced in code (the PHI guard refuses to send a rendered email that names a compound). Track A speaks about treatment categories (GLP-1, hair treatment, sexual wellness, peptides), which is the lead's own stated interest, never a clinical fact about them. Subject lines never mention the vertical.

Send window and cadence

All sends are clamped to 9am–8pm in the recipient's timezone (defaults to America/New_York). Never more than one campaign email per day per contact; transactional emails (order, shipping, clinician messages) are exempt.

Exits are automatic

A purchase immediately stops Track A/C and starts Track B. A cancellation stops Track B and starts the existing win-back journey. An unsubscribe stops everything except transactional email.

Compliance

Every campaign email carries an unsubscribe link and (once set) the physical postal address required by CAN-SPAM. Testimonials require written patient consent. Before/after images are never used without documented consent. Promo codes and refund wording are placeholders until Anthony confirms them.

Personalization tokens

`{{first_name}}` (falls back to "there"), `{{vertical}}` (from the quiz), `{{resume_url}}` (returns to the saved assessment), `{{promo_code}}`, `{{next_refill_date}}` / `{{next_refill_amount}}` (from the billing schedule), `{{referral_code}}` (if a referral program is approved).

Measurement

Every CTA link carries `utm_source=email`, `utm_medium=campaign`, `utm_campaign=<track>`, `utm_content=<email id>`. The goal metric for Track A is assessment completions; for Track B it is refill retention at day 45 and day 90; for Track C it is assessment resumes.

What we need from you

Seven decisions. Everything else is ready to build once these are answered.

1. Promo: confirm WELCOME10 (10% off) or replace it. It drives A13, A15 and optionally C3.
2. Refund policy wording for declined cases (A12).
3. Referral program: yes/no, and the incentive (B8).
4. One consented patient story per vertical (A10) — even two sentences is enough to start.
5. Physical mailing address for the email footer (CAN-SPAM).
6. Confirm 24-month plan prices in pricing.json before A6 goes live.
7. Anything in these emails you'd say differently — the copy is a draft, not a decision.
